

Conversing With God - How Shall I Begin?

I: How shall I begin to do the work that You have gifted me?

How shall I begin to proclaim Your word by my life?

How shall I begin to be the face of God in a world torn apart by fear and indifference?

How shall I begin to serve others, when I can't seem to get a hold of my own life?

How shall I begin to know what to say, how to act, where to go or what to do?

How shall I begin to understand how You wish to work through me?

How shall I begin to love when it seems as though love is in short supply?

God: How shall I begin to count the ways that you make me smile...

How shall I begin to describe the incredible beauty within you...

How shall I begin to tell you that you are never alone...

How shall I begin to express just how wonderful you are...

How shall I begin to show you that all the answers that you seek reside within your own heart...

How shall I begin to let you know just how much I love you..

There are so many ways to begin, so many paths to choose from, so many possible formulas and outcomes. It does not matter how one begins, what matters is that you begin.

If I but think only of your face and the smile upon your face, it would move me to tears of joy; for this beautiful creation of mine is perfect in my eyes. And the beauty that is contained within you is truly the most wonderful and radiant expression of my love when it is shared openly and freely.

You are the most beautiful expression of my love...And I can't wait to see how you will share it with the world...
